Confession Made by a Member of the State Guard.

Examining Trial of the Accused Begins | the gallows," Campbell said: at Frankfort Tomorrow.

AN INTERVIEW WITH COL. CAMPBELL

Louisville, Ky., March 20. Stories growing out of the conference between Sergeant F. Wharton Golden of the Barboursville company of the State malitia, and the attorneys who are managing the investigation of the assassination of Governor Goebel have caused sensation throughout the State. Golden will be placed on the stand by the prosecution in the trial of the prisoners already arrested for alleged complicity in the assassination. But information as to the exact nature of the testimouy he is expected to give is lacking. Attorneys Campbell and Polsgrove naturally Cecline to discuss the matter and Golden himself will say nothing.

"I will do all I can for my friends all the time," Golden is reported as saying, "but I must first be true to myself. into the mountains to investigate this When the time comes I will tell all I know. Whatever else may be said of me, death every time he passes a spot where I do not think I can be accused of being an assassin could be concealed. Still, I a liar, a coward or a democrat, and I want it distinctly understood I am not here under guard,"

The story is published that Golden has divulged to the attorneys the name of the man who fired the shots that killed Governor Goebel. Mak Plain Statement About an A Number of New Suits Filed Three Abourd Story Told About Him.

KUTTAWA, Ky., March 19, 1900. EDITOR PRESS:-While on my monthly visit to Chapel Hill last Sunday I learned that some person who had not the fear of God before his eyes, nor the love of truth in his heart, had circulated a very absurd story that I had said at Crayneville some things disrespectful concerning Mr. Goebel.

I need not repeat the language of the story here. Permit me to say, through your paper, that the story is utterly without foundation. It is simply false in every particular. No such language, nor anything akin to it was used, then, there or at anyother time or

I feel sure that those who know me best, could not believe me capable of using such language concerning any one. It is a source of great satisfaction to me to learn that many of my friends, when hearing the story at once refused to believe it. I learn that you so I sincerely pity the man who started the story. May the grace of God get in his heart, and teach him better things, things that make for truth and fear.

I suppose that this statement from me will be sufficient for all except those who had rather believe evil than good.

Dividends by the Million.

New York, March 15-The Standard Oil Company today disbursed $20,000,000 in dividends. The directors declared a few weeks ago the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent. on the $100,000,000 common stock and 17 per cent. in an extra cash dividend. This probably is the largest cash disbursement ever made at any one time on the stock of a single corporation. Standard Oil stock was quoted today on the "curb" at 538

He has the power to emdeem best, and he is preparing to make a strong fight.

This plan was agreed to after a series of long conferences by the Republican attorneys. Just why they selected John Young Brown as leading counsel is not stated, but is perhaps because he has a following among the bolting Demto the fund which is now being raised for the benefit of the prisoners. This move is said to be in charge of the "Honest Election League," which took such a conspicuous part in the last election.

Harbeson Wins Easily.

Covington, Ky., March 15,-In the vote of Kenton county to elect a Senator to the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Goebel, M. L. Harbeson, Mr. Goebel's law partner, was elected by 529 majority over L. L. Creasey, his Repub-Senate Bill No. 21-The Mc-lican opponent, who was indorsed by the anti-Goebel Democrats.

GRASSHOPPER GLACIER.

lcy Tomb of Thousands of the Longlegged Insects.

There are many remarkable glaciers in that part of the Rocky Mountain uphead or kidneys, stomach trouble and lift that crosses the southern border of Montana. A part of this region has hitherto been unmapped and its more elevated portions were unvisited and unnamed until last summer, when a geographical party piloted the way up the mountains and discovered some of the largest glaciers in the temperate regions of the western world. Here rises Granite Peak which, according to Mr. Gannett is the culminating point of Montana, 12,824 feet high.

Among the glaciers found in these mountains and recently described by James P. Kimball is Grasshopper Glacier, which derives its name from the enormous quantity of grasshopper re-mains that are found on and in the Periodically the grasshopper that thrive in the prairie to the north needs cross the mountains. Their favogifts of countless value are yours? rite route seems to be across this wide Only a few possess limited minds them succumb to the rigor of cold and wind, fall helpless upon the snow and are finally entombed in the ice. In the course of time billions of them have been the victims of this glacier. They are, of course, carried by the ice river down into the valley and deposited at the melting edge of the ice, and Mr. Kimball says that thousands of tons of material at the lower edge of the glaward and upward to a life of no- sand as forming the terminal moraine principal morainal material is grass-

MADE FROM DREAMS.

Inventors Can Tell of Some Strange Experiences.

"It is remarkable how ideas of an inventive nature occur to one, marked Henry Hollingsworth, a Cleve-land inventor. "Frequently when enland inventor. "Frequently when engaged upon problems in mechanics I have gone to bed said dreamed what seemed to be a perfect solution of that which had been uppermost in my mind during the day. But the trouble is that upon awaking, while recollecting per-fectly that I had dreamed the solution, it was impossible to recall the details necessary to a practical application of my idea. You know, it is said of the automatic car coupler, of the double faw type, that the originator of the idea was a telegraph operator, who, while leaning back in his chair with his hands clasped behind his head doz ing, was brought to his senses by the blowing of a locomotive whistle. That noise served as a connecting link for his thoughts. With his hands still clasped, sailor fashion, he slowly brought them around in front of him, and wondered why the cars of that almost universally used car ler, the two jaws of which fit into each other and clasp after the manner of the human hands.

There is a Western inventor who tells of dreaming of railroad spikes one night last summer. He saw around him nothing but spikes, hundreds and thousands of them, and tons and tons piled up in front of him. But these spikes differed from any other he had ever seen in that the four faces were grooved. He thought about those spikes when he woke up, and next night saw more spikes than ever in his dream. Then he became convinced that those spikes were intended as the foundation for the fortune that he had been striving for. As a result the Western man has applied for a patent upon the invention, which it is claimed effects a saving of 20 per cent, in the steel used, and makes a cheaper and better means of holding the rail to the tie than heretofore employed."-Washington Post.

A Literary Policeman.

The news of the distressing death of Charles Ashton, the "literary police-man," as he was called, will be received with genuine regret throughout the whole of Wales. Mr. Ashton was one of those patient plodders so numerous in North Wales where there is much less of the rush and stress of life than in the southern portion of the principality. A child of the Eisteddfed he had published an historical work under its auspices. But the dream of his life was to produce a complete and authoritative bibliography of Welst literature. Amid the picturesque soll-tudes of Dinas Mawddwy, where the policeman's life ought to be a happy one and the most helnous crime is the absence of the owner's name from cart, Mr. Ashton tolled year in and year out upon his task, corresponding with scholars everywhere who were interested in the vast body of Welsh literature and were happy to help him with notes and suggestions.-Birming-

The town of Kos, the capital of the ing off the coast of Asia Minor, posses disciples in his methods and views concerning the healing art 2,000 years ago. Tradition carries the age of the tree back to the time of Aesculapius (of whom Hippocrates was a lineal descendant), which would add some 400 years to its age. A great part of the trunk is built round, and there is a fountain known as Hippocrates Fountain. The circumference of the trunk is 30 feet, and there are two main lower branches, which are supported by masonry columns.

Here in the scene of mingled beauty and grandeur amony many of Kentucky's How a Book Agent Caught the honored dead, in view of the spot where he paid for his loyalty with his life, to-day, loving hands and sorrowing hearts laid to rest the mortal body of William Goebel From all over the land there comes one voice from the people: "Here, with our own hands, will we rear a fit monument to the memory of the brave champion, the true friend, the loving son and brother. It shall proclaim to future generations his last message: "Be brave Mesdames L. S. Leffel, R. C. Walker, and fearless, and loyal to the great common people!" The state has been organized to aid in this work. There are two state committeesone of men, the other of women. They are working together in pertect harmony. I have been requested by the committee of la dies at Frankfort to act as president of the organization in and for Crittenden county. It has been suggested by some of our people that we have only one organization in this-the men and women Midway, Lone Star, Piney Fork and giving to the same collectors. There will be a county board of directors, composed of persons living in different parts of the county. The certificates will not show the amount of our contributions, neither will this be reported to the state committees. I hope everyone will give as generously as possible, but let none hesitate to give because his contribution must be small. The smallest donation will be appreciated and honored as much as the largest. A few weeks ago, when I stood by the lifeless form of Governor Goebel, surrounded as it was by the costliest flowers that money could buy, I noticed above his head a plain wreath of leaves, sent by a poor working girl from his home city. It was the simplest and cheapest piece in the whole collection, yet, it was

HIS FINE APPEARANCE WON.

Ollie James tells a good one on the senior member of the wellknown law firm of James & James. "Some time ago," says Ollie, "there appeared upon the street the finest looking man I ever saw. He was of kingly carriage, dressed like a prince, imposing appearance and impressed you with an idea that he owned cattle upon a thousand hills; had oil stock that would put Rockfeller to sleep,-mining interest that would outshine Alaska with the Rockey mountains thrown in for good measure. He had an overcoat that was as large as eny voting precinct in the county, and a hat that loomed up against the skies like a captive balloon. He met the senior member of our firm on the street and told him that he desired to meet the firm in the office at a given hour. I was out on the street, comfortably esconded on a goods box watching the boys pitch dollars, when my partner came, berated me for "loafdesired to see us in the office. I asked him who he was. "Some had a seat, making himself as February. He was the most gracious man in manners and talk I ever faced. After discussing matters in a general way a few moments, he ran his hand into an and a half feet long and commenced: "Gentlemen, I have a book"that's as far as he ever got with my partner, who is himself a genial man when he wants to be. The senior swung his chair around to his desk and began to write, write, write, and now I am trying to figure out that writing, but it will take an Egyptolian to decipher it. Well, when that fine gentleman was gone, and I suggested to our senior that he ought not to go on the streets alone to become the victim of every passing book agent, there was a scene that I am not ble to describe.

He Is Afraid He Is Going to Be Married in Spite of Himself, and So He Gives the License Clerk a Timely Warning.

Lowell Putnam is in a predicament. He is afraid be is going to be married. He doesn't want to be married yet he is fearful that he will awaken some morning and find a wife among his possessions. He believes that a certain young woman has set her cap for him and will carry her desire into effect by hypnotizing him.

Putnam called at the marriage ilcense office yesterday and explained matters, partially. He did not go in-to many details, but he wanted it thor-oughly understood that if he called at the Courthouse, and asked for a license to wed it was to be refused. He said he did not want a license and if he came for one it would be evident that he was under the hypnotic influence of the young woman who accompanied him.

These rather peculiar remarks led a member of the Republic staff to ask Mr. Putnam for an explanation. Mr. Putnam was at his home, 1121 North Leonard avenue, and he received the reporter in a room whose walls were literally covered with guitars, mando lins and violins. They were hung in racks which extended from the celling to the floor, and scattered about on tables and chairs were other instruments. Piles of music lay upon the mantle shelf and filled the bookcase. Mr. Putnam explained the array with the remark that he played a little sometimes. In the directory he is accredited with being a professional musician. He became ill at ease when the subject of his visit to the marriage license office was broached and said that hypnotism had caused him a great deal of trouble and notoriety which, he said, he was anxious to avoid in the future. After a time, however, he consented to say a little about the case.

Some time ago I met a young woman who has since manifested an unusual interest in me. I did not mind this at first because she is refined and pretty. But a week or two ago I discovered she was in love with me and wished to marry me. Perhaps she did not say so in so many words, but I interpreted what she did say and her actions correctly, I know.

"Then I realized for the first time the power she had over me. I followed her merest suggestion without being able to tell why-except that it was hypnotism. Sometimes these suggestions were spoken, sometimes not. At any rate, I obeyed them."

It was remarked that perhaps Mr. Putnam, because of his previous experience with hypnotists, was an un-usually good subject, and the young woman was simply experimenting upon him. Mr. Putnam shook his head. "No; she has an object. I am not going to tell you how I found out it was her intention to marry me, but it was in a way that leaves no doubt in my mind as to her intentions. She has re-solved upon it, and my trip to the license office was simply for my own protection. I have no objections to the young weman personally, but I do not intend to marry her if I can help it. "I know from what I have done at her suggestion that it would be an easy matter for her to come here some mroning, place me in her power and compel me to obtain a license, and marry her. While in a hypnotic state my actions do not betray the fact to any one, and, therefore, no preacher would refuse to marry us. I know this young lady exerts over me.

"I explained mafters at the license office fully, and told the man I saw there not to give me a license under any condition whatever. I told him that if I did apply I might plead ever so hard for the license and offer him any reward if he would issue it, but he must not listen to me. as I would be in a hypnotic state if I applied for the paper. "Of course, if the girl learns of this -for I do not think she understands the complete control she has over meshe will probably try and get me under her control and take me to some other city for the purpose of marrying me. For that reason I have taken other precautions of which I do not care to

Mr. Putnam refused to give the name of the pretty young woman who is trying to hypnotize him, had his brother Joseph, who is employed in a Washington avenue wholesale house, said he could not imagine who she might be. In fact, he was surprised to hear of the affair, he said. He claimed to know of no one whose actions might lead his brother to believe she was trying to marry him.

Mr. Putnam is about 30 years old. He received considerable advertising a few years ago when a hypnotist and spiritualist left town rather suddenly after interesting a number of young persons in his work. The occasion of his departure was a tragedy in which the son of one of the best known families in town figured .- St. Louis Repub

Shorthand of a rudimentary sort was practised by the Romans. Jiro, the freedman of Cicero, introduced a system which was only an abbreviated longhand. The ideal held before them by inventors of more modern systems is more rapid and accurate. It is described by one of the early fathers of the art, Peter Bales (1547-1610), in these words:-"To write as fast as a man speaketh treatably." He acknowledges that this may seem hard saying.

edges that this may seem hard saying, but insists that in effect the method is very easy, "containing a many commodities under a few principles, the shortness whereof is attained by memory, and swiftness by practice, and sweetness by industry."

Not even an approximation, however, to this ideal was reached until 1837 with the publication of Isaac Pitman's system of shorthand, entitled "Phonography." He revolutionized the art by making his tenographic signs represent the sounds of the English letters. Other inventors like Anderson and Taylor, have made more or less important improvements upon Pitman's system, but Pitman remains the master mind of modern phonography and his
